

For Immediate Release

Jason Druker's 120-day Habitat for Humanity journey stops in Winnipeg today.

Tuesday, November 10, 2009 – Jason Druker's cross-Canada journey will land in Winnipeg today. This is one of 11 stops that Druker, a trainee solicitor from London, UK, will make as he heads across the country raising money and awareness for Habitat for Humanity.

On October 1, Druker took a sabbatical to begin a 120-day journey across Canada to help Habitat for Humanity. "I am so happy to take part in this most exciting and important of volunteer opportunities," says Druker. His three day Winnipeg stop will see him lending a helping hand at the Sir Sam Steele build site on McCalman Avenue (No work will take place on November 11).

Druker was recently inspired to help Habitat after participating in a build in Romania. His journey is raising awareness for Habitat for Humanity and the need for affordable housing.

To support Jason's journey, please go to www.Canadahelps.org, select Habitat for Humanity Winnipeg, click on the 'donate' page and designate your donation to go towards his journey. Habitat for Humanity Winnipeg thanks Jason for his advocacy and commitment to supporting our organization – in Manitoba and across the country.
